

Seniors form companies in teams to compete against each other and with students nationwide in the Glo-Bus game. They go through several rounds of competition and the goal is to receive a score of more than 100. That score means they are successful in exceeding investor expectations. It shows that the team has used their expertise to create and execute a business plan that will attract more investors and be a success in the marketplace. Of the 14 teams competing in 2017-18, more than 50% exceeded investor expectations. More than 60% of the teams the previous year also exceeded a score of 100.

The School of Business is strong at Greensboro College. It attracts anywhere from 130 to 150 or more majors from among traditional and adult students. As the leading major on campus, Business and Economics graduates 20 or more students each year. Most of these students report back that they have landed well-paying jobs within a few months of graduation. In the past year, more than 70% of School of Business graduates had received professional job offers by the time they graduated. That percentage is likely to rise as students make more connections to the job market during their student years.

School of Business students receive excellent advising from our full-time faculty and our fantastic academic support team. We have expanded our online program for adults and lost one full-time faculty member this past year. Both served to raise the number of students relative to our full-time faculty – a normal way to measure coverage. All students who seek advising get it from full-time faculty or our academic support team. We coordinate our work so students can find the clearest and quickest path to graduation.
